Viruses, like bacteria, are microscopic and cause human diseases. But unlike bacteria, viruses are acellular particles (meaning they aren't made up of living cells like plants and animals are), consisting instead of a central core of either DNA or RNA surrounded by a coating of protein. Viruses also lack the properties of living things: They have no energy metabolism, they do not ...

The author uses a very broad and sophisticated vocabulary and uses a lot of figurative language in her writing. The book also contains several delicious Mexican food recipes that go well with the overall theme of each chapter. Each chapter of the book is categorized into a month of the year, causing the book to take place over a span of many years.
